

Rean Economy and Starquad Bantam Patchcords, moulded plugs

What is the difference between? REAN BANTAM PATCHCORD Moulded, heli screen, economy
REAN BANTAM PATCHCORD Moulded, starquad cable

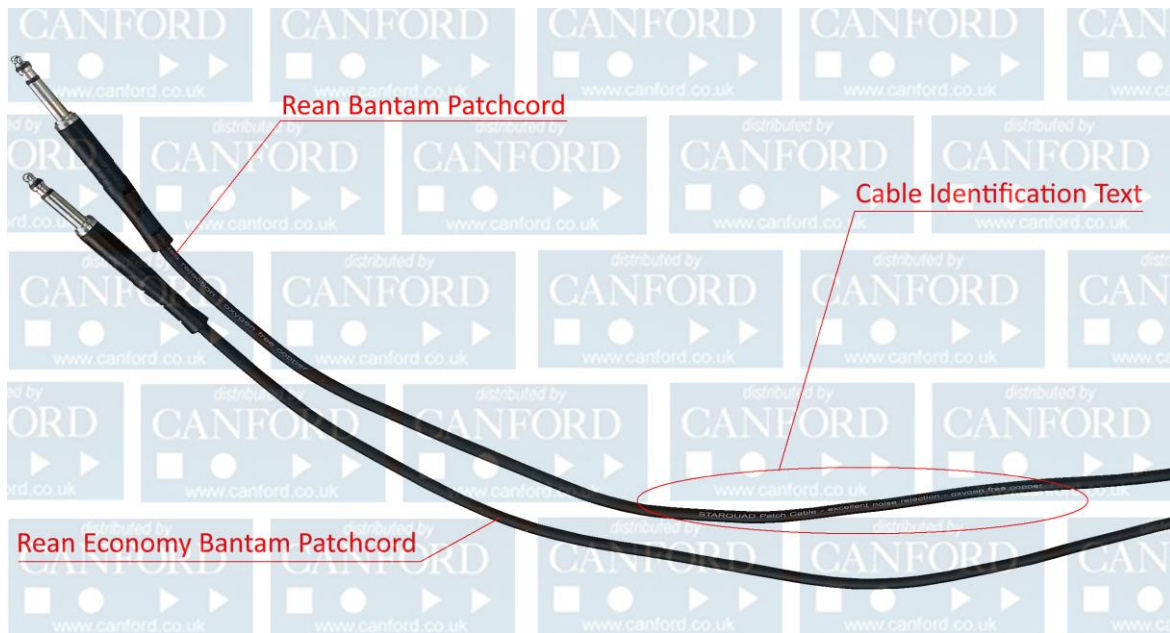

Both cables have moulded plugs and although the cable construction is different between the two it can be tricky to identify such.

Economy cable is a twisted pair with helical screen whilst the 'non-economy' is a starquad cable with again a helical screen. Starquad cable is more efficient in RF and airborne interference rejection and hence the Rean claim that such is a 'low noise' cable.

Given the cables have the same/very similar outside diameter it's not at first glance easy to determine if you have an economy or starquad patchcord in your possession. Luckily however Rean have elected to emblazon the starquad cable along it's length with the following text:-

"STARQUAD Patch Cable – excellent noise rejection - oxygen free copper"

..... the economy patchcord does not have any identification text on it. See illustration below:

Rean economy and starquad Bantam patchcords are available in the following colours and lengths:
